Some criticism has been made against the Woman's club directors for their action in not giving the use of the club auditorium to the two English Women. Miss Ellinor Fell and Miss Florence Schuffield, in which they might deliver their appeal for the help of the 150,000 war orphans of France. Mrs. S. H. Sutherland, the president, has asked me to make public the reasons. At the time the club building was finished, the directors decided that, until the club building should be free from debt, there should be no free list for the use of the club building. The directors adopted the policy that fixed rental prices should be established for the use of the various rooms and the auditorium, singly or in combinations, and that these prices should remain unchangenble on the "one price to all" basis. When the club was first asked to give its auditorium for the French orphans' meeting, the directors thought it best to waite the rule. Then they realized the procedent that would be established by so doing. There are causes in El Paso quite as worthy, though perhaps not quite as This cup is annually played for in competition between teams from New York, Boston and Philadelphia. The reason is that in a recent examination Alfonte made a grade of 100 per cent in the subject of meteorology. The rest of the bunch declare that a man who can make 100 in that subject is too far removed above the plane of mere humans to run in their crowd. The next grade to his was made by Lieut. George Stratemeyer. The bunch say that is bad enough and are threatening to ban "Strat" as well. Of course this ban is only good natured, you know, it would never do for the bunch to fell the fellow they thought there was something to him. to him.

How pretty those metallic embrondered taffetas are. Mabel O'Connor has a very pretty gown of this material, with the silver threads forming a pattern of flowers through the gown and it is trimmed with silver lace.

We are all rather proud of Rev. Miles Hanson. cause, connequently the action of the club.

Much has been said about the density of Englishmen's perceptions of the finer points of a joke, but we have in El Pasa, at least one theater full of people who apparently are beyond the power of appreciating anything but rough, siap-stick humor. As anyone knows who has witnessed "Jerry," Billle Burke's delicious comedy, the play, and particularly the first act, is made up of a dialog that is simply sparkingly bubbling over with wit and a bit of satire. It is cleverly subtle, some of it, mighty witty sill of it, and very well written. The lines come so naturally that there is not the faintest hint of the brilliancy being forced or affected. Now the company at the trawford theater presented the play units well, so it was not the actors fault, but about four people only in the good sized sudlence one night this week caught the humor of it. The rest of the avilence sat phiegmatic and solemn. When the four people, who had a sense of humor, dared manifest their enjoyment of the witty epigrams, the audience would turn from the singe and gape at them open mouthed as much as to say "Well what in the world is that man laughing at?"
